

Training

Description

At UF EH&S, we offer a diverse array of training programs designed to equip individuals with the knowledge and skills necessary to navigate various environments safely. Whether you're a faculty member, a student researcher, or a volunteer assisting with campus activities, our training resources are here to support you. For the convenience of our community members, we provide access to online training modules through UF's dedicated myTraining platform. This centralized hub not only delivers engaging and informative content but also enables users to easily track their training progress and maintain accurate records.

In instances where hands-on instruction is required, such as laboratory settings or specific operational scenarios, we offer in-person training sessions. While these sessions are limited and tailored to particular audiences or situations, our EH&S departments are available to accommodate requests and provide further details.

To explore the full range of training opportunities available or to inquire about scheduling in-person sessions, please don't hesitate to reach out to the appropriate EH&S department. Your safety is our priority, and we're committed to ensuring that you have the resources and support you need to thrive in your academic and professional endeavors.

Thank you for prioritizing safety and for choosing UF EH&S as your partner in promoting a culture of environmental health and safety excellence.

See the sidebar menu or click below

Training myTraining Available EHS
Calendar Tutorial Courses

A q-a-troubleshooting-guide-for-mytraining-system